Velocipedic Ponderings on
Graduate School Survival Skills

Grad school can be a challenge - how does one survive? We all have limited amounts of time and energy to devote to our personal and professional development; I hope to provide some insights as to how we can make the best use of our limited time and energy. In my presentation I intend to share some thoughts and the philosophical outlook I've developed over my career thus far as to how graduate students can make the best use of their time and energy. I likely will also throw in some anecdotes and examples from my own career development that perhaps others can learn from.
